Is It Honest?

Is it honest to charge more than a fair profit for any commodity or more than a reasonable amount for any services? We do not think so.

What constitutes a fair profit on a commodity is of course determined by a number of things as how many of the articles are manufactured or how much of the commodity is produced and the demand for it; also how much capital is necessary to produce it.

What is a reasonable charge for services is largely dependent on the skill required; the preparation necessary to acquire the skill; the knowledge required and the time and expense necessary to acquire the knowledge and the demand there is for the services.

A number of other factors would also unquestionably enter into the determination of a fair profit in the sale of a commodity and a reasonable charge for services.

But when a careful estimate is made of everything that should determine the cost of a commodity and the value of services is it any different from stealing to make an exorbitant charge?

We can see no difference between charging a man a great big price for some article or some service, just because we can get it, and stealing some money out of his pocket just because we can do it. All that we charge him more than the article or the service is worth we are taking from him without giving him anything in return, either because he does not know its value or on account of some other advantage we have over him.

We know that the motto of some men has been to charge all you can possibly get and that they have become very wealthy. We know that it has been the policy of certain political bosses and criminals to steal all you possibly can and that some of them have become very wealthy. In each instance wealth has come from getting something that really belonged to others, although one class was within the law and the other in defiance of the law, but we can see but little difference in the moral principles violated in securing it.

It is also dishonest to attempt to buy commodities or to secure services for less than they are worth. In doing this you are not paying for what you get.

What we are here advocating will probably be called by many silly and impractical but is it not just common honesty?

Would Injure Hillsboro.

To say the least Hillsboro has never been the easiest town in the country to get to or the easiest to get away from. We have always been handicapped by our railroad facilities and the people should oppose any move that will make them worse.

In another column is given the new schedule proposed by the B. & O. R. R. Co. It will only take a glance at this schedule to see that for it to be put into effect will be an injury to the town.

The greatest objection to this schedule is the taking off of the 9 o'clock night train. Otherwise it is very fair. This night train is as badly needed as any train that comes to Hillsboro. To have it on means that many Hillsboro people will reach home a day earlier than they will without it, that people coming here either on business or pleasure will arrive here a day earlier. If it is taken of many a traveler will spend a night in a hotel in Blanchester, who might be at home with his family and be ready for his business the next morning.

To the person going north or east from Hillsboro it will require one more night away from home than it now takes. It will be almost impossible to go to either Columbus or Chillicothe or in the direction of either of these cities without being away over night.

So far as people going to Cincinnati are concerned it will also mean the loss of a great deal of custom by the B. & O. as both the people who are detained in Cincinnati on business after four o'clock and those who remain to attend the theaters or for other forms of amusement will travel by the Traction Line. Surely the B. & O. is not desirous of turning its passenger business over to the Traction Company?

It will also cause Hillsboro to lose the members of the train crew and their families as residents.

We have talked to many of the business men of the town about the proposed change in schedule and without exception they are opposed to the discontinuance of the 9 o'clock train. The Business Men's Association unanimously passed a resolution opposing it.

The new schedule will greatly inconvenience the citizens of Hillsboro; will make our railroad passenger service poorer and generally work injury to the town. It is to be hoped that the protest made to the Railroad Company will be effective and prevent the change being made.

A girl sometimes speaks of a fellow as her "steady" when it is the only way in which the word "steady" applies to him.

The income tax law went into effect last week but we have not been able to see that it has increased our burdens.

Although we have noticed that only efficiency is to control in the appointment of income tax collectors, we have not made application for appointment as we suppose that it would develop to be "political efficiency" that was required and Democratic at that.

The esteemed editor of the Ohio State Journal says, "a man who loves boiled cabbage can not hate his enemies" and there is a number of people we would like to have cultivate a love for boiled cabbage.

HAD A PERFECT ALIBI.

And Plenty of Witnesses Stood Ready to Testify to It.

A lawyer in Portland, Ore., was assigned to defend a Chinaman accused of murder. He had a talk with the official interpreter, who in turn had talked with the man-in-jail and that earnest person assured the lawyer that the prisoner was innocent; that at the time of the crime he had been miles away in a railroad camp. Later they went to the jail to have a talk with the prisoner.

The official interpreter held a long conversation, the lawyer giving him the questions. It seemed all straight and regular. The interpreter insisted that the prisoner had a perfect alibi.

It was some weeks before the case was called, and shortly before that time the lawyer wanted another talk with the accused man. The official interpreter had disappeared, and so he secured for his interpreter this time a Chinaman who had been his cook and who talked fairly good English. They went to the jail.

"Tell him," he instructed the interpreter, "that I want him to relate to me again the exact circumstances, all he knows about this, the whole truth and particularly where he was that night."

The two Chinese jabbered together for fifteen minutes. Then the interpreter turned and said, "He say after he shoot the man he run down Mollison street an' throw pistol in McGuire's fish yard."

"Hold on!" yelled the lawyer. "That can't be true. Ask him again. According to the other story he was miles away and didn't shoot the man at all."

There was another long conversation between the interpreter and the prisoner. Then the interpreter said: "Oh, les; he shoot the man. He say he shoot him an' run down Mollison street an' throw pistol into McGuire's fish yard."

"But," insisted the lawyer, "I was told he was not in the city at all that night, but miles away in a railroad camp."

The interpreter smiled blandly. "Oh, les," he assented cheerfully, "he have plenty witnesses to prove that."—Saturday Evening Post.

WIT OF A MORO UMPIRE.

He Had Learned Our Language Fast and Knew How to Use It.

Captain John E. Morris of the Sixth Infantry was at one time, some years ago, stationed with his company in some inaccessible Moro town. Morris thought that if the Moros of his district could become interested in some sporting stunt outside of head hunting the United States insurance companies' mortality tables could readily be readjusted so far as soldiers were concerned, so he encouraged his men to teach the Moros baseball. When a man is playing baseball he is not chopping off heads, and Captain Morris appreciated this fact.

Two baseball teams were organized, a Moro team and a team from Morris' company, and one day the first game of the series was to be pulled off. The question of the umpire was the great one of the moment, and after much discussion a native Moro was selected to pass upon the fine points of the game.

In Filipino "umpire" is properly expressed as "makifula," and when Captain Morris arrived on the scene of the proposed ball game the Moro who was to be umpire approached him.

"Makifula, me," remarked the Moro. Captain Morris looked at the native umpire without in the slightest understanding what he was driving at. "I'm glad you are a makifula," he remarked, "but please inform me what the word means."

"Means makifula of Americans," replied the Moro. "Me learn American language fast."—San Francisco Chronicle.
